Dental scaling- Dental scaling/ teeth scaling is performed every six months to help patients with removing excessive plaque buildup. A standard cleaning is done to the surface of the tooth, while scaling goes much deeper. If your dentist suggests dental scaling and root planing for your teeth, it's helpful to know what this means so you can prepare for what's ahead. Teeth Scaling is a common dental procedure for patients to clean the gum-line with gum disease. This is a type of dental cleaning that reaches below the gum line to remove hard plaque buildup. The process of scaling and root planing the teeth are often referred to as a deep cleaning. This treatment goes beyond the normal cleaning that you receive with your regular checkup and regular visit.

Dental cleaning- Many people practice daily oral hygiene routines like brushing, flossing, and rinsing and think they have no risk of forming cavities. But this is not true. Plaque or tartar develops even with a careful routine of brushing and flossing daily. Especially in the areas where cleaning substance becomes difficult to reach. Hence professional teeth cleaning becomes important for removing the stain and tartar before any risk is grown. Teeth cleaning is a non-surgical procedure wherein our dentist will check your teeth and clean the tartar that is deposited, plaque and bacterial toxins from the outer layer of the teeth.
