The truth is that we see this kind of image manipulation in many different places in our lives. For example, there are many spots on the web where a series of images are carefully removed from several different spots and blended together to create one unique image. This is seen a great deal in sports where an organization is trying to tout four or five star athletes are key moments within the sport, and so they cut images from different times during the season and blended into one continuous image. This is all done through clipping path skills.
