Dr Subhash Gupta has been the pioneer of Liver Transplantation in the Indian subcontinent. It is largely due to his efforts through the last decade that this specialty has become well established in this part of the world. Liver Transplant today has given fresh lease of life to thousands of patients with liver disease as a result of his endeavors.

Dr Gupta was born in the quiet town of Asansol in the state of West Bengal in eastern India. He spent his childhood years there and began an academically brilliant career at the St Patrick' School, Asansol.

After schooling , he joined the All India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS), Delhi where he obtained his medical degree. He also trained in General Surgery at the same institute before joining the Department of G I Surgery & Experimental Liver Transplantation as Senior Resident.
