Dentistry is a vast field where orthodontics and dentofacial orthopedics are the specialities. They focus on proper alignment of the teeth and various dental arches – maxilla, and mandible. Both practices include appropriate diagnosis, prevention, interception, correction, and treatment of other dental abnormalities. Well, orthodontics and dentofacial orthopedics are different from one another in various aspects and it is essential to understand which service would be the best for you.

Orthodontic is a well-known speciality in Dentistry. Orthodontists help patients who have misaligned teeth by applying braces to straighten the gapped, crooked, and crowded teeth. With this treatment, patients can have better bite and smiles. As everyone is knowing the meaning of the word “Orthodontic” – “ortho” comes from a Greek word which means “straight” or “correct” and “dentic” means “related to teeth”.

Dentofacial orthopedics helps the patients to specifically fix problems that have developed with the bone structure of the jaw and face. They make use of appliances that can redirect the growth to make a variety of repairs including a narrow jaw and fixing the underbite and overbite. When it comes to Dentofacial Orthopedics, the root meanings are just as literal. “Dento” means teeth and “facial” means face.
